READING AND INTERPRETATION OF SCIENTIFIC ARTICLES

REPORT

A program was conducted 19TH August 2023 by the Department on Oral Pathology on “Reading and Interpretation of Scientific Articles.”

Dr. Roshini began the lecture by explaining the importance of Reading scientific literature for students interested in research, for choosing their topics and carrying out their experiments.

She then elaborated on the method and steps to follow while reading an article i.e. one must Begin by understanding the topic of the article before trying to dig through all the fine points the author is making. Always read the tables, charts, and figures. These will give a visual clue to the methods and results sections of the paper and help you to understand the data as well as reading the bibliography/references section.

In conclusion she said that going about things in this systematic manner would enable students to understand the topic and enable them to draw their own conclusions.

The lecture was very helpful and was followed by a lively discussion and brainstorming session.

OUTCOME:

1. The audience understood that going about things in a systematic manner would enable them to understand the topic and enable them to draw their own conclusions.
2. It explained the basics of article writing as well as how to read manuscripts.

REPORT

Name of the program: Good Clinical Practices.

Date: 15th February 2024

Speaker: Dr. Rajendra Birangane

Contact hours: 9:30 am – 10:30 am

Coordinator: Scientific Committee

A lecture on 'Good clinical practices' was Conducted at PDUDC by Faculty Dr. Rajendra Birangane on in lecture hall from 9.30 am to 10.30 am followed by a question and answer session and group discussion.

Dr. Birangane introduced the topic and explained that Good clinical practice (GCP) encompasses an internationally recognized standard for clinical trials that include ethical and quality requirements that must be adhered to for any clinical trial that involves people.

She also pointed out that GCP principles center around three main concepts: ethical principles, safety as a priority, and informed consent. These principles ensure that researchers conduct clinical trials in a way that respects participants' dignity and rights while providing high-quality, reliable data.

She stressed that GCP are needed to ensure that the rights, safety and well-being of the subjects undergoing trial are protected, at the same time ensures the credibility of clinical trial data.

It was a very interesting session and was well appreciated by all the attendees.

OUTCOME:

1. The audience was enlightened about the importance of good clinical practices.
2. They understood its application in current clinical dental practice.
